

Master in European Economic Governance (Meeg)

Luiss
School of European Political Economy

Meeg aims to produce full-fledged economists and experts in the field of European regulation and policy.

Technical and analytical competencies acquired through the program are intended to form professionals with a comprehensive understanding of the European regulatory framework, professionals who are adept at managing relations between national institutions, companies, and European institutions.

After one year, students will earn an international master's degree in Economics. The Meeg is a second level master's degree (Master di II livello). It is conducted in English, with a completion requirement of 60 credits.

All applicants must possess a four or five-year undergraduate degree (or equivalent diploma) and will be selected based on their CV and, in certain cases, an interview.

The Luiss School of European Political Economy will assist students with solid academic track records in finding internship opportunities at economic and financial institutions, both Italian and European.
